International students pay the full-time fees plus nonresident fees.

Do I need to submit financial documentation? If you plan to enter the United States with the F-1 or J-1 visa or are currently in the United States with the F-1 or J-1 visa and plan to transfer to Boise State, you will need to submit financial documentation to show you have the funds available to support you for one full year, and a funding plan for subsequent years. If you are currently in the United States with a different visa classification and plan to change to the F-1 or J-1 status, you will need to submit the financial documentation also. If you are currently in the United States with a different visa classification and do not plan to change to the F-1 or J-1 status, you will not need to submit any financial documentation.

I am being sponsored by my government. Do I need to complete this form? Yes, you need to complete this form indicating that you are a sponsored student. Please also submit the original financial guarantee from your government sponsor. Your sponsor does not need to complete the "Family/Sponsor Certification" part of the form.

What if I'm living with a host family or friends? You must show that you have the funds available for housing and food even you are being hosted by family or friends at no cost to you.

Scholarships or Assistantships? If your admission application is complete by the scholarship deadline of February 15 for the following fall semester, you will be considered for any available scholarships. Scholarships are competitive and awarded based on grade point average (GPA). Graduate students can apply for an assistantship through the department of their major, before the specified deadline. You will need to contact the department for any additional information. The assistantship form is available at:
<http://gradcoll.boisestate.edu/funding/>

If you are applying for, or receiving, a scholarship or assistantship, the amount of the scholarship or assistantship would count towards the full amount you are required to document as available to you. You would then need to show documentation for the remaining estimated costs.

Financial Aid? International students who are in the United States with a visa do not qualify for any type of aid program that is federally funded. A provision of the student visa is that federal financial aid may not be accepted.
